Manager Comment

Global markets ended April in positive territory on the back a relief rally following the results of the first round of French presidential elections. The markets perceived the results positively as Emmanuel Macron, who edged Marine Le Pen, is largely perceived as the favourite to win the upcoming second round on 7 May. A Le Pen victory has been seen as mostly negative for markets due her more populist stance. In South Africa, the cabinet reshuffle towards the end of March continued to drive public debate with most opposition political parties driving calls for mass mobilisation against President Zuma. In early April, rating agencies S&P and Fitch downgraded South African credit rating on the foreign and local government debt. Fitch adjusted the rating on both local and foreign debt to sub-investment grade while S&P dropped the foreign currency rating to sub-investment grade but kept the local currency rating at investment grade.

Developed market equities rose 1.33%, lagging emerging markets, which gained 2.04% while global developed and emerging market bonds rose 1.13% and 2.16% respectively in USD. Locally, the FTSE/JSE All Share Index surged higher, returning 3.64% in April driven mostly by large cap stocks such as Naspers. Rand weakness following the cabinet reshuffle at the end of March benefitted large rand stocks on the exchange and as a result large caps gained strongly (4.47%) while small (-2.56%) and mid (-0.8%) cap stocks lagged as these stocks are mostly exposed to the local economy. In terms of sectors, all the major sectors rose during the quarter with industrial and financials being the strongest gainers. Despite the volatile political environment, nominal bonds rose 1.47%, outperforming cash (0.61%), inflation-linked bonds (1.15%) and listed property (0.51%). The rand was mixed relative to major currencies, strengthening relative to the USD and Japanese yen but weakening against the British pound and euro.

Following the risk-on month, funds with larger allocations to equity tended to outperform. Returns in general, however, have been mostly positive as all major asset classes saw gains during April. The strongest gains came from the Nedgroup Investments Global Equity and Truffle Flexible Funds while more defensive funds like the Prescient Income Provider and SIM Active Income Funds lagged, performing more in line with cash.

Year to date most of our managers have delivered solid gains on the back of stronger market returns. While we remain relatively bullish on equities, locally and offshore, we are still cognisant of the number of local and global risks which may negatively affect client capital. We thus remain focussed on ensuring that we hold appropriately diversified portfolios considering the client risk mandate.
