Manager Comment

The global outlook continues to be positive for growth, with some deterioration in economic momentum as the winds of trade war, geopolitical risk, domestic political fractures, and debt-related risks loom, with financial markets already reflecting mounting vulnerabilities. The positive cyclical backdrop is expected to support earnings growth over the rest of the year. The risks to this outlook, however, are elevated, and include the mature stage of the economic and financial cycle and increased trade tensions. Among developed markets it is expected that falling unemployment and slowly building inflation drive central banks towards monetary tightening. Furthermore, heightened trade tensions are a threat to the positive global trend and tit-for-tat measures could derail the momentum of investment and trade. As such, the World Bank highlighted that global growth is set to slow over the next two years as central banks raise borrowing rates and fiscal stimulus starts to fade in countries such as the US and China.

Global equities made gains in a volatile quarter, as resilient economic and earnings data contended with an unsettling geopolitical backdrop. The MSCI World index delivered 1.73% in dollars while emerging market equities declined some 7.90% in dollars, as emerging market currencies depreciated on capital flight and an unwinding of the carry trade. This saw the rand depreciate some 13.55%. In bond markets, US 10-year Treasury yields rose significantly in April, and touched a seven-year high in May, before the risk-off investment environment led to the buying of safe-havens assets. Subsequently, The JP Morgan Global Aggregate index declined some 2.46% in dollars as bond yields pushed higher. Emerging market bonds had a difficult quarter and underperformed their developed market counterparts. As such, the JP Morgan EM index slumped 4.14% in dollars. Furthermore, the global property market rerated over the quarter, gaining some 5.43% in dollars.

The local equity market fared better than the broad emerging market basket during the second quarter. The ALSI gained 4.54% in rands. A strong quarter for Resource and Industrial shares helped the local market post positive returns. As such, in rands, the Resi20 index and Indi25 index delivered 21.73% and 5.29% respectively. The Fini15 bucked the trend, delivering -6.63% for the quarter. Foreigners were net sellers of the local bond market to the tune of R68.1 billion for the quarter, as investors remain concerned about the recurring theme related to the reversal of 'easy money'. The SA 10-year yield pushed 85 bps higher and settled at 9.04% at month end. As such, the ALBI delivered -3.78% in rands. Inflation-linked bonds underperformed their sovereign counterparts, delivering -4.99% in rands. Furthermore, the local listed property market came under pressure as bond yields pushed higher. As such, the SAPY index delivered -2.19% in rands. Furthermore, local cash returned 1.76% for the quarter.

Fund with larger offshore and equity exposures therefore performed well with the Old Mutual Global Equity and Satrix MSCI World Index FF leading the gainers over the quarter while the Prudential Enhanced SA Property Tracker and Satrix Momentum lagged.
